

Latina.

From migrants to winemakers

Looking for a casually chic destination?

California is your only choice. It's world-class wineries, cutting edge designers, and year round sunshine, will have you wishing to be a California chica.

With the creation of twelve Mexican-American owned vineyards in California since 1991, Latino's are cementing their place in the wine market. Drop by the Robledo family Winery in Sonoma, where the winemaking family opened the first Hispanic tasting room in the country four-years ago. They make an award-winning Cabernet, among other varietals, so take home some bottles to enjoy and support. Also visit Ceja Vineyards in Napa and pick up a spicy Zinfandel from Alex Sotelo Cellars in Napa.

http://www.latina.com/BestWestern/CA_description.html